HERITAGE DAYS 2019

Please join us for the 22nd annual Heritage Days on Saturday, June 29 and Sunday, June 30 and celebrate Montgomery County history, culture, and nature!

We are excited to introduce new locations this year including an open house at the refurbished Swains Lockhouse 21 in the C&O Canal National Historical Park. Located in Potomac, Swains Lockhouse is joining the Canal Classrooms Program offering educational opportunities for grades K-12, and the Canal Quarters group of historic canal lockhouses available for overnight rentals. This is also the inaugural Heritage Days for Black Rock Mill in Seneca Creek State Park, which celebrates Maryland’s important place as the “wheat basket” of the United States from the mill’s opening in 1815 until the Civil War.

This year, we are delighted to welcome some of our Heritage Harvest Festival partners in the Agricultural Reserve: Rocklands Farm Winery, Soleado Lavender Farm, and the Sculpture Garden and Studio at Alden Farms. Gaithersburg Latitude Observatory, one of six observatories around the world created to measure variations in latitude caused by the earth’s wobble, will celebrate its 120th birthday.

If history inspires you, Harpers and Oakley Cabins and historic Brookeville and Sandy Spring provide opportunities to study local African American heritage. If nature beckons, Audubon Naturalist Society’s Woodend Sanctuary and Izaak Walton League Conservation Farm await.

LETTER FROM THE DIRECTOR

Our 2019 grantees are wrapping up some exciting HM-funded projects – a moving vocal program featuring music and stories of Montgomery County African American history is being produced by Washington Revels, the C&O Canal Trust is opening the newly renovated Swains Lockhouse Canal Classroom on Heritage Days Weekend, and new interpretive panels will be going up at White's Ferry. Thanks to all our partners for another year of inspired and enriching projects showcasing Montgomery County!

We continue to monitor and review ongoing planning items including unusual cell tower placement proposals, the proposed expansion to I-270, and challenges to the county Management Plans.

Montgomery County Parks' Rustic Roads and Seneca Creek State Park are two partners bringing new programs to the heritage area. I've spent several beautiful spring days exploring their new sites and spectacular, winding country lanes. We're working with both groups to get programs up and running for all to enjoy.

Come and enjoy Heritage Days weekend, June 29 and 30! Nearly 40 sites will be open for free and will shine a spotlight on the wonderful diversity of our county. And mark your calendar for the Heritage Harvest Festival on October 5 and 6 when partner sites in the Agricultural Reserve will be open for your enjoyment.

And finally, we welcome our new and returning county officials and look forward to working with them!

NEW FACES

We are very pleased to welcome two new members to the Heritage Montgomery Board of Directors: Abby Clouse-Radigan and Rebeccah Ballo.

Abby is the librarian at the Bullis School in Potomac. She has a PhD in Comparative Cultural and Literary Studies. As a Mellon Fellow at Wesleyan University, she taught about the history of museums, the politics of collections, and Native American cultural property rights. She has also worked as a researcher for the Smithsonian Institution and at the White House Historical Association, which published her newly released book, Official Residences Around the World. Abby serves on the board of Historic Medley District, Inc. in Poolesville.

Rebeccah is Supervisor of the Historic Preservation Section at the Montgomery County Planning Department and board member for Virginia at Preservation Action. Before assuming this role in 2018, she managed the design, review, and approval process for Arlington County's 40 historic districts and previously was a preservation planner in the City of Alexandria and Prince George's County.

REMEMBERING KEN RUCKER

With sadness we share the passing of Ken Rucker, National Capital Trolley Museum's Director of Administration and President of the Board of Trustees. Ken was a Heritage Montgomery board member and a great friend to our organization.

Born in Washington, D.C., Ken taught social studies for 37 years, first at St. Mary's Catholic School and then at Atholton High School. He is remembered as a dynamic and inspiring educator by his many students. Ken served the Trolley Museum for 50 years. He led the museum through several transitions, including recovery from a 2003 fire and development of the current $10 million campus, which assures the museum's success for years to come.

A leader in State museum organizations and mentor to many, he will be remembered for his dedication to providing top-notch experiences to the public and holding us all to a high standard. We will miss his wry wit, love of food and travel, and his keen observations on all things.

ANS WOODEND NATURE SANCTUARY

MINI-GRANT UPDATES

Our Mini-Grant partners continue to create, educate, preserve, and document the history and heritage of Montgomery County. Highlights of a few projects we funded this year:

- Speakers and special events at the Sandy Spring Slave Museum. “The Living Museum,” a special Black History Month program, featured 14 actors who portrayed civil rights figures throughout American history.
- The making of Land of Woodend, an Audubon Naturalist Society (ANS) documentary celebrating the 50th anniversary of the Woodend Nature Sanctuary. The film explores the transformation of the 40 acres that are home to ANS environmental programs and documents restoration efforts that include a forest, stream, meadows, native plants, an accessible trail, mansion upgrades, and more.
- The development of “Stories and Music from Heritage Montgomery’s African American Trail” by Washington Revels. We will be announcing a schedule of performances very soon.

AFRICAN AMERICAN HERITAGE PRIZES AT HISTORY DAY 2019

The Underground Railroad in Sandy Spring, the tragic history of lynching, and the Great Migration's effect on the renaissance of the arts in Harlem were the topics winning special Heritage Montgomery prizes at Montgomery County Public Schools' History Day.

Held every March, History Day provides local middle and high school students with the opportunity to identify and research a topic of interest within a historical theme and to submit projects in a variety of formats. Under the 2018-2019 theme, "Triumph and Tragedy in History," submissions included exhibits, papers, documentaries, performances, and websites.

Each year, Heritage Montgomery sponsors special prizes for research and interpretation of African American heritage. This year's students provided some outstanding results – so much so, there was a tie for first place. Prizes were awarded to Dylan and Joelle Moore from the Bullis School for their senior group documentary, The Underground Railroad: A Slave's Path to Freedom through Sandy Spring and Beyond, and to Caleb Robinson, also from the Bullis School, for his senior individual documentary, Strange Fruit, an exploration of lynching as it evolved from murder to its larger use as a societal control.

Second prize was awarded to Poolesville High School's Hannah Kim and Imaan Shanavas for their senior group website, Expression from Oppression: The Role of the Great Migration in the Development of Harlem Renaissance Art. This project also won second place in the Maryland History Day competition and has advanced to National History Day.

Montgomery County History Day is presented by Montgomery County Public Schools working with Montgomery History and the Maryland Humanities Council, and is open to public, private, and home-schooled students. Visit MontgomerySchoolsMd.org and search "History Day" to see all the award winners.

AFRICAN AMERICAN RESEARCH PROJECT

In May, we bid a fond farewell to Isabella Hlavacek, a senior in UMBC-Shady Grove's Public History Program who spent her final semester assisting us with research for HM's African American Heritage Trail project. Isabella's internship sprang from Heritage Montgomery's ties with Dr. Melissa Blair, a UMBC history professor who has undertaken heritage preservation efforts at Pleasant View Historical Association and other historic African American communities. Isabella was also the copy editor for UMBC-Shady Grove's History Student Journal and a member of the History Student Association. We'll miss her enthusiasm, wit, and deep appreciation of tacos – and wish her a bright future.

To help you make the most of your planning, you'll find some suggested groupings of participating sites by locale and topic on our website. For example, the county's Native American History will be in the spotlight at Peerless Rockville, where dancers and drummers will perform to celebrate the beginning of Heritage Montgomery's Native American Trails project. Nearby, Montgomery History will celebrate its 75th anniversary with festivities and special programs.

Pack a picnic, load the kids in the car, and celebrate Heritage Days as you discover fascinating sites and stories throughout Montgomery County!
